Loaded Barge In Night Runaway

Work On Bridge Delayed As Barge Goes Down Stream

Barge Moored To Pier Heads Down Stream When Lines Break.

MOTOR BOAT SINKS

River Craft Founders In Effort To Tow Heavy Craft Up Stream.

Work on the bridge across Red river at Fulton is temporarily slowed down because of the fact that part of the material needed is 9 miles down the river and getting it back promises to be something of a task. Endeavoring to tow it back to its proper station by using mules along the bank resulted in making one mile headway in three days and an effort to tie it on to a power boat sent that little craft to the bottom in 20 feet of water.

The barge was moored to a pier over toward the west bank of the river and a rise in the river broke it loose and sent it whirling down stream. It was heavily loaded with steel to be used in the finishing touches of the huge structure, and once it gained headway the three men aboard were powerless to hold. It drifted during the night, but about daylight the current threw it in close to the bank. Lines were cast off, one of the men leapt ashore and snubbing the unwieldy craft to a tree. No damage was done to either barge or its contents. Contractors had hoped to have the bridge ready for use by Thanksgiving Day but this delay will likely cause formal opening of the structure to be postponed until the first week in December.

Barricades Home, Defies Officers

Mountain Man Refuses Arrest When Sought On Statutory Charge

PORT SMITH, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Sheriffs of three counties combined their forces today in an effort to arrest Neill McLaughlin, an outlaw under death sentence in Arkansas, who had barricaded himself in his bullet proof home in the mountain fastnesses of Franklin county and staged a battle with officers who last night sought to arrest him on a statutory charge and a charge of carrying concealed weapons last night.

Sheriff M. L. Ledgerwood, of Franklin county, enlisted the aid of Sebastian and Crawford county officers today after he had failed to rout McLaughlin from his house. Sheriff Ledgerwood and deputies went to McLaughlin's house last night to arrest him on the two charges. When they appeared McLaughlin opened fire. Because McLaughlin's wife and children were in the house the officers refrained from returning the fusillade.

McLaughlin was sentenced to death in 1915 for a statutory offense but his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. Escaping from the penitentiary, he later returned to Little Rock and made a plea to former Governor Brough.

Knife Is Used By Husband In Trio

Another Eternal Triangle Has Ending Usually Expected

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Sept. 20.—(AP)—Chas. Van Brunt, 45, is in a hospital here today suffering from serious knife wounds said to have been inflicted by Leonard Brown at the latter's home last night.

Brown is quoted by officers as saying that he returned home to find Van Brunt there. He accused him of paying attention to Mrs. Brown. A struggle ensued, during which the knife wounds were inflicted.

Brown was held without charge pending the outcome of Van Brunt's injuries.

Ramsey To Open Cafe In Greene's Tea Room Stand

W. M. Ramsey, better known to Hope people as "Bill," is back again after a period of rambling around and is arranging to open a modern cafe in the building now occupied by Greene's Tea Room on Front street, the new place to open for business Monday morning. Ramsey is known as one of the most capable restaurant men in the country and his decision to go into the business here means he figures business opportunities here are better than in many of the communities he has looked over.

State Air Tour Here Wednesday

Planes Assembling At Little Rock For Visit To Local Fair.

Entries for the second annual Arkansas Air Tour (which leaves Little Rock next Tuesday, September 24, and reaches Hope on Wednesday, the 25th—Aviation Day at the Southwest Arkansas Fair)—are pouring in fast, and Hempstead county will see the most airparks in its history next week.

The tour will be in command of Capt. Robert H. Baker, operations officer at the last encampment of the Arkansas National Guard Squadron, with Lieut. Ellis M. Pagan as flight leader. Lieut. Pagan is in charge of the Command-Air flying service and school at Little Rock, and is thoroughly familiar with all the country to be flown over the air tour.

Hope will greet the flyers about noon next Wednesday. The tourists leave Little Rock early the day before, swinging through East Arkansas and doubling back to Fort Smith, in extreme western Arkansas, where the first night will be spent. Wednesday morning the convoy will come on to Texarkana, and to Hope for noon luncheon at the Southwest Arkansas Fair grounds. From Hope the party will head for Pine Bluff.

Among the planes already guaranteed for the tour are the following:

Colonial Baking company, Little Rock, President, A. C. Jones, flying in a Command-Air.

Democrat Printing and Lithographing Co., Arkansas Lumber company, and Mutual Life Insurance company of New York, flying undesignated planes.

Arkansas Power & Light Co., Pilot Motor Crawl (flying a Robin monoplane powered with the famous Challenger motor which established a world's endurance record at St. Louis).

Missouri Pacific, Traveler plane powered with Wright Whirlwind. The Union Trust company is also expected to send its Swallow plane which visited Hope recently on the pathfinding excursion preliminary to the tour.

Bodcaw Fair Gets Excellent Crowd

Hope Sends Delegation To Nevada County Event Today

The Bodcaw Community Fair today presents an excellent showing according to one contingent of Hope business men who drove to Bodcaw for the occasion this morning. There was a complete exhibit of products of the home, farm and school room. The attendance was greater than was expected.

Those who attended from Hope include Lex Helms, of the Hope Fertilizer Co., C. W. Weltman, John F. Cox, president of the Kiwanis Club, Roy Anderson, cashier of the Arkansas Bank & Trust Co., Lynn Smith, county agent, and Mrs. Smith, and George Ware, manager of the State Experiment farm. Mr. Ware is acting as judge of the farm products. A. D. Middlebrooks, local grocer, will drive over to attend the fair this afternoon.

Major R. B. Stanford returned last night from Arkadelphia where yesterday he was one of the pall bearers at the funeral of J. C. Meadows.

Pension Rolls Being Purged of Many Ineligibles

110 Names Have Been Stricken From Rolls Since July 1.

5,444 REMAIN ON LIST

Ten Years Ago Arkansas Pension Roll Carried Over 11,000 Names.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 20.—Names of 110 persons have been removed from the Confederate pension roll since July 1 because of ineligibility for various reasons, according to records in the office of state Auditor J. Oscar Humphrey. Act No. 158 of 1929 authorized the Confederate Pension Board to purge the rolls and the board has been holding meetings almost weekly since July 1 to check records of pensioners, whose right to draw a pension has been questioned. Removal of 110 names will reduce the pension payroll $66,000 a year, each pensioner receiving $50 a month under a law passed in 1917. The state board asked county boards to certify names of pensioners whose eligibility, in the opinion of the county board, should be investigated.

Reinstate Several
Several pensioners have been dropped from the roll because they are nonresidents. Two or three persons who live near the Louisiana and Texas borders in Miller county and who receive their mail on rural routes out of Louisiana or Texas, were dropped from the roll when their names were sent up by the county board as nonresidents, but they were reinstated and given back pay when it was discovered that they reside in Arkansas, members of the state board said.

Less Than Last Year
The pension roll for September contained names of 5,444 persons, which was about 300 fewer than in September, 1928. Ten years ago the pension roll carried more than 11,000 names.

Trivial Law Violation Leads To Killing of Augusta Farmer

AUGUSTA, Ark., Sept. 20.—(AP)—Tillman Wilkerson, about 65, a farmer living near here, was shot and instantly killed on Main street here early today by Detective Montague, night marshal. Montague said the shooting was caused by Wilkerson's resisting arrest on a minor charge and was forced upon him.

Charge Kentucky School Book Board

Governor and Other Members To Have Trials In Early October

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 20.—(AP)—The trial of Governor Flem D. Sampson on a charge of receiving gifts from publishers of text books seeking to have their books adopted for state use, was set for October 22 by Circuit Judge Ben C. Williams today.

The governor and other members of the board are charged with having received hundreds of sample copies of books, and that after examining them some of the members of the board sold them. This has been admitted by two board members.

Messenger Takes Boss To Cleaning

Said To Have More Than Half Million Securities In Possession

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP)—R. V. Hiscoc & Co., brokers, notified police today that one of their messengers had disappeared with securities valued at more than $512,000.

The police said the messenger, with the company's check, secured the amount in securities while waiting for an escort of clerks, but when they arrived he had disappeared.

Arkansas-Grown Melon Winner of Grand Prize At West Texas Annual Exposition

Some way, wherever one of these old Hope boys makes headquarters folks always manage to find out something about Arkansas, Southwest Arkansas in general and Hope in particular. Occasionally, one of them will even say something about watermelons.

Carter Gibson has been hanging out at San Angelo for some two years or thereabouts and decided he'd give those Tejanos a treat by showing them a real watermelon. He came up to the festival in August and arranged with his dad to ship him one in time for the West Texas Fair, an annual event at San Angelo.

Mr. Gibson did that very thing. He shipped a 125-pound Improved

Former Hope Man Engine Authority

A. L. Dyke Regarded As Foremost Authority for Auto and Plane Motors

A. L. Dyke, who will be best remembered by the older citizens of this community as "Lee," was a visitor here last night and this morning, en route from his home in Chicago to Texarkana and other points where he has business interests and has cordially welcomed by those friends of other days.

In the years passing since he left Hope, Lee Dyke has gone far in his profession of mechanical engineer. He is regarded as one of the country's foremost authorities on internal combustion engines, his encyclopedic treatise on auto and airplane motors being standard authority. The work is now in its 4th edition and another, according to the author, will be off the press early next year.

Older citizens here say that when A. P. Dyke, father of Lee, was a resident of Hope he threw his feet in front of him and by persistent, consistent and sensible boasting inculcated the ten village with growing pains and many of the things the city enjoys today had their origin with this man who was at heart a town builder. He was a one-man civic organization.

Pulaski Appeals Convict Cases

Make Final Effort To Keep Prisoners On County Roads.

Supersedeas bond was posted yesterday in Circuit Court by Frank Neal, Pulaski-Perry road district foreman, to protect the state from loss pending the county's appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court from the decision of Judge Marvin Harris in granting a writ of mandamus directing that negro convicts working on the road district be turned over to state penitentiary authorities.

H. L. Norwood, attorney general, and Walter Pope, assistant, filed a motion to quash the supersedeas so the state might obtain possession of the prisoners at once, but the motion was overruled by Judge Harris.

100 Expected To Attend Supper At Capital Tonight

County Farmers Invited Here In Interest of Dairy Program

IMPROVE LIVESTOCK

Aim Is To Place Pure-Bred Bulls In Reach of Every Herd

Close to 100 farmers and city business men will meet at the Capital hotel at 7:30 o'clock tonight for a supper and discussion of pure-bred livestock.

The meeting, which is being sponsored by a score of Hope men who have invited Hempstead county farmers here as their guests, aims to launch a county-wide program of importing high-class bulls to improve milk production in Southwest Arkansas.

Bull clubs, which have been used extensively by the farmers of other states, will be suggested at tonight's meeting. It is hoped to place a carload of pedigreed, pure-bred bulls among the various farm communities of the county at such strategic points that every dairy herd will be benefited.

The meeting tonight is regarded as the most important since the establishment of the Kraft-Phoenix cheese factory and the launching of a dairy program in the county. Indications this morning were that a record number of farmers would attend.

High School Gives Rotary Program

Paisley, Coach Coleman, Capt. Moore Speak At Luncheon

The day is not far distant when single school districts will administer the public education of an entire county. Four Arkansas counties have already tried to install this centralized system, and in one, Mississippi county, it lost by only nine votes, D. L. Paisley, city superintendent of schools, told the Rotary club at its luncheon today in the Barlow hotel.

"There is no sense in drawing an imaginary line a mile around Hope," said Mr. Paisley, "and saying that if you live inside this line you are entitled to nine months' schooling and a high school education, but if you live outside the line you must be content with six or seven months, and no high school. The taxpayer pays the same, whether he lives inside or out, of the line."

Much of Mr. Paisley's address dealt with the personnel of Hope's city schools. He found the number of students per teacher to be rather high, there being 47 teachers to 1,528 students, in white and negro schools. Arkansas, he said, is spending only $40 per year per student, as compared to $176 spent by California.

The bonded school debt is $77,200, the superintendent said, and annual interest on bonds amounts to $4,351. The city schools are a year behind on their current operating account, however, and interest on this loan amounts to $1,518.33 additional, he said.

Today's luncheon program, which was in charge of Joe Kirby, also included speeches by Eusel Coleman, high school football coach, and Norman Moore, captain of this year's team. "Hope has better prospects now than last year," Coach Coleman said. "The opening home game, Fordyce, on October 11, will bring one of the probable runners-up in state football this year; and we have a game with another recognized contender El Dorado. I may also say that we hope and expect to beat Prescott this year." Captain Moore's talk was an appeal for solid support of the team by the city, and the promise of the best fall campaign that eleven men can produce.

Miss Elizabeth Dean, of the high school faculty, gave an excellent humorous reading.

Night Club Fire Takes 16 Lives

Poetry Cures Marital Ills

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 18.—If your husband beats you, try poetry; some of the sentimentality which surged through his breast years ago may still linger there, needing only a gentle fanning to bring it into flame again.

The plan has worked in at least one instance, according to Miss Alice Yonkmen, chief of the family service bureau, whose job is to untangle family difficulties. In this case the worker assigned to the case discovered that the husband often cut poems from papers and magazines. She suggested that he try writing poems to his wife.

Pleased with the idea, he tried it and now, says Miss Yonkmen, he is falling romantically in love with his wife again.

Shot Aimed At Girl Kills Her Escort

Drunken Row At Dance Leads To Death of Man In Shooting Affray

LE PANTA, Ark., Sept. 20.—(AP)—Struck by a bullet said to have been intended for a girl, James Owen Brown, 34, was killed at a dance near here last night. "Happy" Rhodes was sought by officers today, as the man who fired the shots.

Brown and Rhodes and two girls, names of the latter pair not having been learned, had gone to the dance together. A quarrel followed and officers said Rhodes reached for a pistol. As it was aimed at one of the girls, Brown jumped before it, the bullet striking him in the heart. Rhodes was said by officers to be intoxicated at the time.

Attorneys Issue Shelton's Reply

No Money Lost Through Alleged Irregularity, Claim

The following statement was received by The Star this morning in connection with the recent news story published about W. C. Shelton, former assistant cashier of the Citizens National Bank:

Editor Hope Star:
We are writing your paper with reference to the charges filed in the Federal Court at Texarkana by an agent of the Treasury Department against Mr. W. C. Shelton of your city. The agent charges Mr. Shelton with making a false entry on the bank's books and abstracting a thousand dollars of the bank's money.

While these charges have been given more or less publicity, Mr. Shelton has refrained from making any statement about the matter under the advice of his counsel, and we have delayed issuing a statement until we could investigate the facts connected with the transaction, so that whatever statement made may be dependable. After making a cursory investigation of the facts we now feel justified in stating that the charge of making a false entry on the bank's books is entirely without any foundation, so far as is known, either to the bank or Mr. Shelton. As to abstracting a thousand dollars of the bank's money, our investigation discloses while there may have been some irregularity in the manner in which this item was handled by Mr. Shelton, there is nothing in the facts tending to show any intention on his part to misappropriate the bank's money. As a matter of fact, the bank has not lost a penny by the transaction, neither has Mr. Shelton gained one. Mr. Shelton, in our opinion, has committed no crime and he and his counsel ask the public to withhold forming any opinion about the matter until he can have a full and impartial judicial determination of the facts.

Guests Trapped When Flames Cut Through Room

More Than A Hundred Hurt In Mad Stampede For Safety

NIGHT LIFE CENTER

Place Was Crowded With Actor-Theatre Patrons When Alarm Given

DETROIT, Sept. 20.—The death list in the fire which early today swept the Study Club, one of the centers of the city's night life, 16 persons were burned to death or suffocated at 1:30 this morning.

DETROIT, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Trapped in two small rooms where they had sought escape from fire and smoke that swept through the Study Club, one of the centers of the city's night life, 16 persons were burned to death or suffocated at 1:30 this morning.

Nine of the dead were men and seven were women. Nearly a hundred others were injured, some by fire and smoke and others in the frantic struggle among the 200 guests and employees of the place to escape when the cry of "fire" precipitated a panic. Of the injured, perhaps 50 were seriously injured.

Many of the injured were found unconscious when rescuers, police, firemen, taxicab drivers and passers-by rushed into the building as the first flare-up of the flames subsided.

The Study Club, located in the edge of the downtown district, was filled with actor-theatre patrons. The flames broke out in the dining room which was on the second and top floor of the building. Almost instantly the flames, fed on highly-inflammable decorations on the walls swept around the room, driving the diners to the dance hall floor and from there to the kitchen and the women's rest room, the only exits except the main stairway which was blocked by the flames.

Proprietor Arrested
Marten Cohn, proprietor of the club, was ordered held for investigation by Duncan R. McCrea, assistant prosecutor, who took statements from a dozen entertainers and employees who were brought to police headquarters.

"There is evidence of criminal negligence here," McCrea stated "and I am going to find out who is responsible. This place was a fire trap, did not have adequate means of escape, and for that condition some is responsible."

Gabriel S. Goldwater, fire marshal, stated he believed the fire to have been an accident. "I can find no violation of the fire laws and cannot agree that this was a 'set' fire," he said. He expressed the opinion that the fire was started by some smoker carelessly tossing a match or cigarette into the wall decorations.

Tax Assessors To Be On Full Time

Will Not Be Allowed To Accept Outside Employment During Term.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 20.—County tax assessors may not teach school or accept outside employment while serving as assessor, Attorney Hal L. Norwood ruled yesterday in reply to an inquiry from the state Tax Commission. The ruling was based on the revised assessment law of 1929, which places all assessors on a salary basis and requires them to devote all their time to the office.

The question was raised by an assessor who inquired if he could teach school during the next six months and leave a deputy in charge of the office. Another assessor asked the commission if he would be permitted to accept two or three months' outside employment and place the office in the care of a deputy.

A Community Hospital
SPEAKERS before the Hope luncheon clubs have made a direct appeal for action on the proposal to establish a city and county hospital here. Chap Weltman, president of the Hope and Hempstead County Hospital association, spoke to the Rotary club recently, and yesterday Dr. W. R. Anderson, long an active member of the hospital association, brought the subject to the attention of the Kiwanis club.
In both of these addresses there was an invitation for the taxpayers of Hope to submit possible plans of financing the new hospital. If the Star might be permitted to suggest it, the probable plans can be reduced to two.
The property of the city could be bonded for the amount of the improvement, with the understanding that the profits of the municipal light and water plant would be used to retire the bonds; or, the city might re-sell the power plant to itself as a corporation, and "hook" the plant for the required loan. This would leave private real estate entirely in the clear—and this was the plan followed by the City of Conway in raising a large cash guarantee for a new school there.
Whatever the plan adopted, it will probably call upon the profits of the power plant. This is simply good business for the community. The municipal plant serves the city government by furnishing official light and water free. Its profits should be used in the judicious upbuilding of the social and industrial factors which affect the lives of individual citizens.
A community hospital is an important factor. What is needed is more than the mere physical property—a community medical center. Everywhere in America today one hears the complaint from both physicians and laymen that the increasing cost of medical attention has worked a hardship on the middle classes. A well-governed city owes it to its people and to the medical fraternity to set up a modern hospital plant which will bring the best surgical facilities within reach of all. Not all are really able to pay—but plain charity would never be acceptable to them. It remains for the tax-power of the city, whether derived from real property or the profits of the municipal plant, to solve this social problem.
Hope, furthermore, has this to remember: The county and its neighboring counties look naturally to this city to develop the enterprises which go along with the prestige of a great territorial trading point. Hope is all of that—and sooner or later it will build the city and county hospital.

Those Deplorable Conditions
THE investigation has revealed information that causes us to believe that conditions during the past two sessions have been deplorable.
"It is regrettable that testimony received in a number of cases was not definite and sufficient for the return of more than two indictments."
"We suggest that the next grand jury carry on the investigation, for there have been developed some good leads, and the nefarious practice should be uncovered if at all possible."
We quote from the final report of the Pulaski county grand jury for the March term of First division circuit court, and the references are to conditions in the last two sessions of the Arkansas legislature.
That "deplorable conditions" existed in those two sessions certainly will come as no surprise to newspaper readers. Nor will there be any astonishment over the grand jury's use of the expression "nefarious practice"—to say nothing of the statement that some "good leads have been developed."
That interests behind the horse racing bill were active in both sessions of the legislature was generally known. Public gossip even went so far as to report that varying amounts of money were offered for speeches on the floor of both houses in behalf of the measure. Political log rolling and "doctoring of records" also were talked about the town.
But assuming that these were mere rumors—though in no sense discounting all of them—hence, not "official," the report of the Pulaski county grand jury can not and should not be ignored. That body has had the advantage of examining witnesses who certainly must have been able to speak with the authority of personal knowledge of conditions in the legislature and it has declared that "nefarious practices" should be uncovered "if at all possible."
If bribery and doctoring of records have been practiced in the Arkansas legislature we can see no reason why indictments should not be returned. Certainly, any failure to uncover such violations of the law hardly will result from ability to secure evidence—accepting the statement that some "good leads" have been secured. Therefore it is the plain duty of the next Pulaski county grand jury to follow those leads in justice not only to the people of the state but to the honest members of those two legislatures who, it seems to us, should gladly furnish information for their own protection.—Arkansas Democrat.

WASHINGTON LETTER
BY RODNEY DUTCHER
WASHINGTON—One of the most certain things about Premier Ramsey MacDonald's visit to Washington is the assurance that the British prime minister won't come unless he and President Hoover have reached a complete mutual understanding in business.
His appearance here is planned as a gesture of agreement between the English-speaking peoples, a felicitous move of probable great moral effect toward world peace. The agreement itself is still being worked out and there is still just a bare chance that no satisfactory conclusions will be reached. In any event, it should be understood that MacDonald has had no thought of coming over here to continue the unsettled negotiations in person.
MacDonald and Hoover both realize that the British premier's "spice" will not without an agreement would be worse than no "spice" at all. The political effect would be paid in both countries and might especially react against MacDonald, whose position is none too strong. The effect on British and American psychology probably would be even more serious.
Lawrence Rieker, the Hoover secretary, captured a strange beast recently on the Virginia estate where the president goes fishing. Returning from a holiday devoted to fire-fighting, Rieker brought the animal back in a nice clean tin can to find out what it was and dumped it onto Secretary George Anderson's desk for the inspection of Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, who was waiting for an audience with the president.
The critter turned out to be of the crawling variety, about six inches long and less than an inch thick, most fearsome in aspect. The general color scheme was high green and it was armed with horns, claws and talons.
"Don't touch it!" warned Rieker to several who gathered around the desk to gaze in awe. Then he attempted to return it to the can with an envelope opener, unsuccessfully until Hyde rushed in heroically.
"What are you all so damned afraid of?" he demanded, as he tossed the things in with a quick sweep.
At last reports the beast was being psychanalyzed at the Bureau of Entomology.
Among recent political gossip is the rumor that Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Joseph M. Dixon is being groomed to oppose Senator Thomas J. Walsh in the Montana senatorial election next year.
Dixon failed to defeat Senator Burton K. Wheeler last November, losing by some 12,000 votes while Hoover was getting a majority of 35,000 over Smith. There are some reasons, however, why he might have more success against Walsh, despite the tendency in officers to return Democratic senators where the race is customarily close.

ARKANSAS PHILOSOPHY
LITTLE ROCK AGAIN TAKES TO THE AIR!
THE second airplane tour of the state, sponsored by the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce, has two purposes:
(1) To direct public attention to the growing importance of aviation in trade and commerce.
(2) To cement cordial relations between the capital and other towns and cities.
Good roads, improved railroad service—and finally air transportation—are banishing the barriers of distance in Arkansas. Thus do nearly two million people in this state become more closely united in effort, as in fact.

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

It was only a drop of dew
That watered the heart of a rose;
But the rose bloomed out her gracious span.
A thing of beauty and praise for man,
In her fragrant garden close.
It was only a tender thought
Of the father's love and power;
But a heart with pain and woe oppressed
Through that loving thought found strength and rest,
And was healed that very hour.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Helen Page feels unhappy when her classmates accuse her of being in love with her handsome guardian, Leonard Brent. But she represents all that she knows of home and family and she has promised to clear up the mystery of her birth after she graduates.

However a chance meeting with a dying beggar causes Brent to change all his plans regarding Helen's future. Before the man dies he tells Brent that his name is Charles Owens Nellin; that his wife is dead and that he has hidden a daughter from a wealthy grandfather, Cyril K. Cunningham, of Yonkers. Posing as a newspaper man searching for story material, Brent secures facts and evidence which aid his plans.

When Helen graduates she reminds her guardian that he has promised to tell her about her parents, and is amazed when he tells her that she is the heiress of Cyril K. Cunningham. He shows her a locket which he had secured from the dying Nellin and tells her the picture is of her mother, Evangeline Cunningham Nellin. In accordance with a promise made to her parents, he tells her that he must now take her to her grandfather. Obtaining an interview with Cunningham, Brent introduces Helen as his granddaughter and tells him her story. He is skeptical until he sees a locket which Brent had secured from the dying Nellin. This locket contained a picture of Evangeline Cunningham Nellin which the old man recognizes.

Cunningham and his lawyer request that Helen remain at Bramblewood until an investigation is made. Brent favors this, but the girl objects, resenting the fact that she is under suspicion. Brent makes her stay and the old man tries to win her love by the gift of a beautiful new car. The girl drives everywhere alone and one day accidentally strikes a young woman who has to be taken to a hospital.

treated at the hospital. Helen goes to the girl's home to bring her mother and brother.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Helen saw Mrs. Ennis release herself and hurry up the stairs. A moment later she was facing Bob. He came across the room and stood quite close to her. "What happened," he said quietly, tensely, "to my sister?"

CHAPTER XVI
Helen felt like a prisoner at the bar. The brother knew, she was certain, that she would not be here unless she had had something to do with the accident.

She turned a little cold and her hands trembled in spite of her effort to remain calm and return his steady glance unflinchingly. Because of this she raised her head with a touch of defiance.

"It struck her with my car," she said icily.

The brother reached out and caught her arm. Helen winced.

"Forgive me," he apologized, recovering himself instantly. "Eva is very dear to me."

All Helen's hardness vanished. "Need I say I'm sorry?" she asked.

"How badly is she hurt?"

"She'll be all right soon," Helen told him. "Dr. Parkley pronounced her in no danger, but she is in pain." Her voice broke a trifle and she got out her handkerchief to wipe her eyes.

Bob forebore to question her further.

"Will you drive my car back to the hospital?" Helen asked him.

"I haven't had a great deal of driving experience," he told her.

"It's a standard shift," Helen said. "I wish you would."

"Perhaps Mom would feel safer," he answered, without meaning to wound.

Helen flushed. "She doesn't know," she said. "Please don't tell her until she has seen your sister."

Mrs. Ennis came in just then and Bob nodded in silent answer to Helen's request.

Without comment other than: "Shall I drive for you?" he took the wheel when they got to her car.

Mrs. Ennis remembered then to introduce them. "Miss Brent, this is my son, Robert."

They smiled at each other faintly and Helen looked away.

On the way to the hospital Mrs. Ennis pressed her for information about the accident and at last Helen sent an appealing glance to Bob.

He wasn't looking at her and Helen could not tell what moved him to help her. "You will get yourself excited, mother," he said. "Wait until you've seen Eva and then Miss Brent will tell us all about it."

Mrs. Ennis choked back her questions. "I guess I'd better keep calm for Eva's sake," she said. "My poor girl, my poor little girl!"

"Now, now, mother," Bob soothed her. "They won't let you near her if you can't control yourself."

Helen found herself listening to him as though his words were intended for her. There was in his voice a magic quality the strength that commands and the tenderness that protects. It stirred a response in her that was vaguely troubling.

Mrs. Ennis subsided and the drive was continued in silence.

At the hospital the mother went alone to her daughter's room. The brother would be admitted later, the nurse in charge told them.

Bob waited downstairs with Helen.

It was a wretched period for her. Suddenly, after a few rapid strides up and down the room, Bob had started to question her. She found herself telling him precisely how the accident happened—except that she could not explain what mental disturbance had affected her driving.

As her answers came, drawn from her almost against her will, she began to see herself through her inquisitor's eyes.

Reckless driving! He did not say it, but the charge was in the sternness of his expression in his gestures, in his manner.

And Helen could not deny, even to herself, that she was guilty.

"You devil-may-care girls are a menace!" Bob broke out at last.

Helen gasped.

"You raise hell with everything," the young man went on, growing a bit furious. "Here's Eva, poor kid, been slaving all her life to be a violinist and now . . . now maybe you've crippled her hands!"

"Oh no," Helen cried out.

"Well, it isn't your fault that you haven't. Her luck held, that was all. But you might have ruined her life. Why? Just because you've a speed mania and money to satisfy it with a fast car. And nothing to do but tear around the country looking for thrills."

Helen was slightly gasping now, but she did notice that he made a remarkably striking picture in his anger.

She forgot that he was merely scolding a girl for her irresponsibility, and that she was that girl. Her mind had become a sensitive plate upon which his personality was etching itself for all time to come. His personality and his appearance.

Commonplace, perhaps, in the brownness of his hair, the blueness of his eyes, but lifted into a class of exceptional distinction by the fine cut of his features and the verile quality of his mind that revealed itself in his flashing expressions and vibrant voice.

He was still tirading against modern youth while Helen sat speechless, when someone came in to tell him he could go to his sister's room.

"I'll wait to take your mother back," Helen said to him.

"You devil-may-care girls are a menace!" Bob broke out at last.

"Don't bother," he replied curtly. "We'll take a taxi."

Helen bit her underlip until it hurt. "But I must see your mother again," she protested.

"I don't think she will want to see you when she knows that it was you who ran Eva down," Bob paused at the door to say.

Nevertheless Helen waited, held by a penitence that made her wish to suffer to the fullest for her fault.

She was prepared, when Mrs. Ennis returned, to face a second tirade, or at least a harsh attitude. Instead Eva's mother came to her and tried to thank her for her kindness.

Bob stood by, scowling darkly.

"I know you couldn't help it," Mrs. Ennis said chokingly.

Helen's own eyes filled suddenly with tears. "I want to do everything I can for her," she said feelingly. "It was my fault and I'm dreadfully sorry. She isn't suffering so much now, is she?"

"No, she's quiet. And we will soon be able to take her home."

The mother gave Helen's hand a friendly pressure and the girl repaid her with a swift embrace. It was the first she'd ever given to a mother, and though the impulse had torn through the effect of years of reserve it was not robbed of its simple pleasure.

"You will let me drive you home?" Helen pleaded.

"Of course we will," Mrs. Ennis answered hastily. "But you need a bit of looking after yourself. I think perhaps Bob had better drive you home."

Helen carefully avoided looking at Bob. "I'm cured of reckless driving," she said soberly.

She rather fancied she heard a faint "Humph" from Bob but still she did not look at him.

"Let's go then," Mrs. Ennis suggested. "Bob must have his supper and father will be wondering what's become of us. We should have left a message."

"I've telephoned," Bob told her, and Helen remarked to herself that he had an extremely cool head for one who could become so heated while indicting another person.

Bob did not offer to take the wheel on the return drive and Helen felt that he was testing her nerve. For the first time in her life she called upon the strength that is derived from pride. She set her hands firmly on the polished wood and willed her trembling to cease.

It didn't cease but she drove creditably, and though white-hot points seemed to break through to the surface of her entire body she yielded not one outward sign of her nervousness.

But when she slid the car to a stop before the Ennis home the strain had become unbearable. A sigh of relief rose from the bottom of her heart. She barely managed to suppress it.

"You will stay for a cup of tea?" Mrs. Ennis invited as Bob got out of the car and turned to assist her.

Helen shook her head. "My grandmother is waiting for me at home," she explained.

Mrs. Ennis did not repeat the invitation. She knew that Helen did not belong to the modest social world in which she and her children moved. Helen's lavish provision for Eva's comfort was sufficient proof to her that Helen belonged to a wealthy family. She had been uneasy about offering her humble hospitality. Helen's refusal lifted a burden from her mind.

"But you will go to see Eva?" she urged. "She wants to thank you for your kindness."

Again Helen heard a faintly contemptuous sound from Bob. Her face flushed hotly. With a quick movement she prepared to drive off but his voice stopped her. What he said came as a most unexpected surprise.

There were all shapes and sizes of golfers at Pebble Beach, but the one with which you surely are familiar if vaulting ambition ever misled you to a golf course is that of Dr. O. F. Willing, the deliberating dentist from Portland, Oregon. Before making each shot, Dr. Willing goes through all the gestures of an old maid preparing to retire for the night. A tee shot is as important an affair to him as the passing of a peace pact by Congress. The only thing he didn't do at Pebble Beach before making each shot was to look behind the nearest trees for Indians. Jokingly, some of the scribes said that his initials "O. F." really stood for "old-fashioned."

The Surveyor

Painstakingly he sighted each putt from every possible angle. There were no airplanes handy, so the only slant he didn't get was a bird's-eye view. It was the same with shots from the tees where he invariably would look down the fairway like a desert prospector, peering at the horizon for possible signs of water. In the rough, though, he wasn't often there—he went through the motions of a Scotchman getting ready to pay a luncheon check for a party of 12.

There was an odd contrast in his match with Cyril James Hastings Tolley, the impetuous, athletic Britisher. Tolley is the kind of gent who walks up to the ball and thumps it. Ceremonies mean just lost motion to him. He wants to be going ahead. Delay irks him. The dispatches said Tolley was wild.

No wonder!

Lott Knows Cuss Words

Geo. Lott, Jr., the Chicago tennis star, regarded by many of the tennis experts as one of the game's coming champions, says he tries to keep his talk to himself during a battle on the courts. In a preview of a talkie picture, showing Lott in a tennis match at Newport, the reason was revealed the other day—Lott, when missing or dubbing a shot, lets go with a flock of longshoreman's consonants that would grace the vocabulary of any golfer.

A Feature of Southwest Arkansas Fair Leavelle In Initial Effort As Promoter Stages Good Show

The Ouachita "Tigers"

The Magnolia "Muleriders"

The annual clash between these two classy elevens will be one of the features of the Southwest Arkansas Fair next week. Game will be played at Fair Park Friday afternoon, September 27, beginning promptly at 2:30 o'clock.

Introductory Card Full of Action and Fair Crowd of Fan's Get Their Money's Worth and Then Some

—Johnny Hall-Hi Mitchell Next Attraction

Tex Leavelle appeared last night in the dual role of promoter and fighter, as his initial offering presenting to Hope boxing fans by odds the best card staged since boxing was revived here several months ago, and it maintains the high level established in last night's card there will have to be greater seating capacity at the Rink to care for the crowds.

The fun started when the first bout began. Two youngsters staged the curtain-raiser, and then Johnny Celmar shuffled in to start the evening's fireworks. Which he did. For the gent from Cotton Valley, La., who was in the opposite corner, soon realized that he wasn't out for any picnic. In the second round he grew a trifle careless. Bam! Left to the jaw. Curtains.

Chief Hocutt an Oklahoma Indian, and Young Favis, of Cotton Valley went on for an eight-round semi-final. Both were clever and willing boxers and kept the crowd on tiptoe by furious attack and counter. In the early stages of the fight it was all Hocutt, but in the later rounds the Louisiana man found himself and came back strong. The referee's decision of draw met with popular approval.

The main event, Leavelle against Herschel Dean, was a slam-bang affair from the going, with Leavelle frothing the fighting and uncovering a style of attack he had demonstrated before in his bouts here.

Don't think for a minute Mr. Dean was to be taken lightly. That young man is plenty tough and dangerous as dynamite so long as he can stand on his feet and swing a fist. With all of Leavelle's slashing style of attack he took proper precautions to avoid coming in contact with Dean's hooks or swings. Which was wise.

Dean took three rounds of the ten, Leavelle five and the other two were draws and the crowd expressed its hearty appreciation of the festivities.

No announcement has been made for a card next week. The Fair will be on and it may be the promoter will lay off for the week. But the following Thursday night Johnny Hall and Hit Mitchell will be the attraction—and if it is action, fast action and plenty of it you crave, that's one bout you can't afford to miss.

The ball goes into the net, and —"Well, I'll be etc., etc., etc.," says Mr. Lott, and not always to himself. Lott was asked about it. "It's unnatural to smother your feelings whether you're playing for the national championship or just miss a subway," said he. "I try to talk to myself when 'displeased, but don't always succeed."

Lott believes the United States will soon regain the Davis Cup. He bases this on the expectation that the American team next year will be composed of young players.

Lacoste, with a cold that threatens to become chronic, he believes is through. Lott regards Australia as the coming threat. All that is needed by the Aussies, he says, is a capable partner for Jack Crawford, Tilden and Hunter, he says, have proven their inability.
